Finish Lines

Several growing trends are converging on the cabinet hardware industry at once. Universal Design, wellness, nature-inspired style, gold and black finishes – and, of course, the desire for beautiful, functional spaces – are all impacting the products entering the marketplace.

For those who are concerned about aging-in-place, as well as germs and cleanliness, there is a significant influx of decorative hardware pieces that deliver an ergonomic design and even have natural or added antimicrobial properties. A desire to make the home a refuge has led to a renewed interest in natural materials and designs, and the decorative hardware market does not disappoint, delivering forest- and seaside-inspired style as well as more organic textures and materials. In addition, the silver tones continue to yield to more unexpected options, including blacks and off blacks – especially matte – and golds in every variation from silvery to rosy to antique.

Not to be outdone, the design of functional hardware has been stepped up a notch, with slow-close and quiet-close hinges and drawer slides getting improvements in operation, wear and tear and load capacity.

On this and the next several pages, Kitchen & Bath Design News showcases some of the newest decorative and functional hardware to enhance cabinets and designs throughout the home.

1. The new AvanTech YOU slender drawer side profiles from Hettich America come in a thickness of only 13 mm and are entirely without any visible holes, apertures or cover caps. The drawers can be configured in three colors and five heights with steel, aluminum or wooden rear panels.
